Course Description: Introduction to the scientific study of human society, including ways in which groups, social institutions, and individuals affect each other. Causes of social stability and social change are explored through the application of various theoretical perspectives, key concepts, and related research methods of sociology. Analysis of social issues in their institutional context may include topics such as social stratification, gender, race/ethnicity, and deviance.

Course Requirements: The basic structure of this online class in Blackboard includes an introductory assignment, eight quizzes, four-unit tests, four discussion question forums, four journal papers, two major assignment papers, and a Reflection Paper for extra-credit (optional) or an extra-credit alternative opportunity (optional). At 8:00 AM on Mondays of this sixteen-week spring 2022 course, I will post weekly announcements to inform you of upcoming due dates. Please make sure to review due dates by accessing the Announcements link in the Course Communication section in the menu bar.

There are four learning modules in sociology 1301. I recommend that you click on each unit's calendar or learning module's calendar for an overview of due dates. It is important that you get to work right away.

Please review the instructions in the Course Overview document in terms of reading about the major sections of the course in Blackboard.

The Course Overview document can be accessed by clicking on the Course Documents and Course Overview Learning Module link (Learning Modules link) in the Coursework section of the course menu bar.

Weekly announcements will also reflect what is in each unit's calendar in terms of due dates. I would also like you to review the course's grading criteria, which is on page 8 of the course syllabus. The grading criteria will help you determine the number of points that each assessment tool awards. Here are the course's requirements:

1. An Introductory Task or Assignment: Your first introductory task or assignment is 40 points and is in the Learning Modules section relating to Unit One (Major Theoretical Perspectives). This assignment is also in the Assignments section of your menu bar, which is under the Coursework heading.

The purpose of this first question is for you to acquaint yourself with the instructor and important sections of the course. Please pay attention to the due date by clicking on the Announcements link.

To view course schedule information, you should also click on each Unit's learning module to access the learning module's calendar or unit's calendar.

Instructor feedback will be provided individually on the introductory assignment through the My Grades tool or link. Please make sure to access the rubric for your introductory assignment grade breakdown.

2. Quizzes: Eight quizzes, at 15 points each, will be offered. Quizzes are short and they will help you do well on your major Unit tests. You will receive 1 point for each question or item on the quiz that you correctly answered. Each quiz will consist of 15 questions or items. You will have 15 minutes to complete each quiz.

Each scheduled chapter quiz has its own set of fun learning activities and the activities are in a Study Mate folder in each learning module. Please make sure to study before you take a quiz because once the due date for a quiz expires, you will not be able to take the quiz.

Quizzes are in the Learning Modules. Furthermore, by clicking on the Assessments link (under the Coursework heading), you may also access the quizzes.

Instructor feedback will be provided individually on each quiz through the My Grades tool or link.

3. Tests: Four major unit tests will be offered, at 60 points each. You will take one unit test for each learning module covered in the course. You will receive 1 point for each question or item that you correctly answered on each unit test.

Tests may be accessed by clicking on the corresponding learning module or the Assessments link. The Learning Modules and the Assessments links appear under the Coursework heading.

Each unit test will consist of multiple-choice questions, true or false statements, matching terms, and short-answer questions. Please refer to the Course Outline section (pages 11, 12, 13, 14, &

15) of this syllabus to view the chapters from which I may pull out examination material. Each learning module unit has its own unit test review list. You will be given one hour and thirty minutes to complete each major unit test.

Instructor feedback will be provided individually on each test through My Grades tool or link.

Review lists for unit tests can be accessed by clicking on each learning module covered in the course. The Learning Modules link is on the left-hand side of the course's homepage. Review lists include important sociological vocabulary words from your textbook's chapters, which are relevant to course outcomes. These lists should serve as study guides; however, successful test or exam outcomes will also depend on the completion of other course requirements that are listed in this course syllabus.

I have also included in each learning module, Study Mate files for each corresponding chapter. These Study Mate files are filled with interesting and fun learning activities to help you prepare for each unit test and scheduled quizzes. I encourage you to participate in the Study Mate files' activities as you review for each unit test.

4. Discussion Posts: Discussion questions can be accessed through the Discussion Board link under the Coursework heading. There will be a total of four discussion questions in the course. Each discussion question is 25 points. The Discussion Board link is on the left-hand corner of your menu bar. There will be a total of four discussion questions in the course. The purpose of discussion questions is to facilitate interactive social dialogue and discourse on a variety of assigned social topics and issues.

Discussion questions may also be accessed through their corresponding learning modules.

Instructor feedback will be provided individually on each discussion through My Grades tool or link. Each discussion question will have a rubric with your grade breakdown.

You will be able to use your sociological imagination as you interact with the instructor and other students who are taking this online course. You will receive a grade for thoughtful and academic participation on each post. I will not grade you on your opinions, but on how you articulate your thoughts in reference to the application of relevant sociological concepts and theoretical perspectives to the discussion posts. Late discussion question responses will not be accepted.

To receive credit for participation in each discussion post, you must post an initial response (around 250 words in length) and give at least one response to other students' postings (simply writing "I agree" or "I disagree" is unacceptable). Furthermore, you will not be able to read other classmates' postings until you post your initial response. Your second response should be at least 150 words in length. Hence, you must remember that for each topic, you must post at least two times.

Click on each learning module's calendar for an overview of the due dates of the unit's discussion question.

You may also access the due dates of the unit's or learning module's discussion question by clicking on the Announcements link in the Course Communication section in the menu bar.

Discussion questions will be drawn from a variety of reading materials including my lecture notes, the course textbook, and other materials.

I would like you to feel free to post general questions relating to the course in the Discussion Board section of your home page. Click on the discussion forum technology feedback link to post your question. You may also respond to questions posted by other students.

5. Journal Paper: There will be a total of 4 journal paper opportunities at 50 points each in the course. Each learning module in the course will have its own journal paper opportunity. The purpose of each journal paper is to reflect and summarize what you have learned in each learning module. I strongly encourage you to use your “sociological imagination” as you relate any sociological issue or concept covered in the module to your personal life experiences or stories.

Instructor feedback will be provided individually on each Journal Paper through My Grades tool or link. Each Journal Paper will have a rubric with your grade breakdown.

6. Two major assignments: There will two major assignments in this course.

The two assignment papers will address the following Student Learner Outcomes and Core Objectives:

1. Compare and contrast the basic theoretical perspectives of sociology. Critical Thinking Skills. (Assignment #1-culture-graded student work but not submitted for data collection)
6. Develop, interpret, and express ideas on a Soci 1301-related topic through written communication. Communication skills-writing. (Assignment #2-autobiography)

Assignment One will require you to interview a friend or family member about his or her culture. Your friend's or family member's culture should be different from your culture.

Assignment Two consists of you writing your own autobiography or memoir.

Please note that each paper assignment is mandatory and is a major requirement of the course. In other words, each student must submit the two major assignments.

Furthermore, a student will not be eligible to turn in the three-article reflection paper extra-credit opportunity or the alternative extra credit opportunity if he or she does not turn in the two major assignments.

Instructor Feedback will be provided individually on each major assignment through My Grades tool or link. Each assignment will have a rubric with your grade breakdown.

You will be able to access the two major assignment guidelines by clicking on the Assignments link, which is under the Coursework heading.

Each assignment paper must be typed (Word document), double-spaced, Times New Roman font, and 12-point font size. Furthermore, each paper must be at least three pages in length.

For Paper # 1-observation of culture, you must use APA style.

Paper #2-autobiography is a personal essay paper and does not require APA style.

For Paper #2, you will write a personal memoir or autobiography. Later, I will provide you with a list of possible experiences that you may want to write about.

When paper #2 (autobiography paper) becomes available (after covering chapter four-socialization), please make sure to access Assignment Paper #2's folder in the Course Resources section under the Info and Resources heading to view the Memoir or Autobiography guidelines created by Purdue Owl.

Assignment Paper #1-(Culture Paper)

Assignment One will require you to interview a friend or family member about his or her culture. Your friend's or family member's culture should be different from your own culture.

You may draw your observations from past interactions with your friend's or family member's culture. Perhaps you remember these interactions very well and they probably took place before the global pandemic hit our shores. I can still remember attending many multicultural events with my friends and family. These events allowed me to obtain a close-up view of their unique and different cultures.

To practice social distancing and to take safety precautions, I want you to feel free to use any social media tool that you may have at your disposal. Thus, you may want to ask your friend or family member questions about their culture via Messenger (Facebook), Twitter, Instagram, Facetime, WhatsApp, Zoom, Microsoft Teams, etc. Feel free to use any other type of social media tool to interact with a friend or family member to obtain relevant information for your paper.

The purpose of observing a friend's or family member's culture is or group that is to familiarize oneself with a different culture. When society's members interact with other cultures, mutual understandings are formed or created. This will lead to better social interaction between cultural groups.

Furthermore, culture provides the foundation or blueprint of society. It is also the glue that holds society together and culture also provides the foundation of human behavior.

Later, I will make available the instructions or guidelines for the culture paper (after the conclusion of chapter three-culture). I will also provide you with a template for APA style and relevant sources on culture in Assignment Paper # 1's folder in the Courses Resources section under the Info and Resources heading. The sources that I make available will help you identify and select the appropriate sociological or theoretical perspective that you can use to explain the culture of your friend or family member.

Culture paper: 50 points Culture paper period to submit: February 14, 2022, at 8:00 AM to March 6, 2022, at 11:59 PM.

No late assignments will be accepted. Please review my late work policy in the course Syllabus.

Assignment Paper #2 (Communication-writing paper)

You will write a three-page autobiography. Your autobiography will cover a meaningful social experience or experiences in your life. The social experience or social experiences should be about something meaningful that happened in your life. In your three-page autobiography, feel free to discuss your own meaningful experiences (for example, your experiences with food, image, going to work, going to school, participating in a student club, life during the global pandemic, helping a young child learn to read, helping your parents, and or helping the poor, etc.).

It is important that your autobiography or personal memoir is filled with personal examples of your meaningful social experiences. This will allow me to determine how well you are able to connect your personal examples or experiences to the broader public issues affecting the larger or broader society. Furthermore, writing your personal autobiography will allow you to understand how your own personal experiences are connected to what other members of society are experiencing or have also experienced in their lives.

As you write about a meaningful social experience or meaningful social experiences, you will be required to use the major sociological or theoretical perspectives and socialization theories for explanation and interpretation.

Assignment paper #2-autobiography paper must be typed, double-spaced, Times New Roman font, 12- point font size, and at least three pages in length. You will turn in your paper as a Word document.

Later (after covering chapter four-socialization), you will be able to access Assignment paper #2 guidelines or instructions, by clicking on the Assignments and Learning Modules links (under the Coursework heading).

Later, please make sure to access the resource link in Paper #2's folder in the Course Resources section under the Info and Resources heading. This link will help you access the Memoir or Autobiography guidelines created by Purdue Owl.

Communication (writing) paper: 50 points

Communication (writing) paper period to submit March 7, 2022, at 8:00 AM to April 3, 2022, at 11:59 PM.

No late assignments will be accepted. Please review my late work policy in the course Syllabus.

7. Extra-credit opportunity (you may only choose one of the two extra-credit options or opportunities).

Extra-credit Reflection Paper assignment opportunity. This is an extra-credit and optional assignment with a 45 points value. To be eligible for this extra-credit opportunity, you must turn in the two major assignment papers (Assignment Paper #1 and Assignment Paper #2).

Sociological issues or problems are addressed daily by numerous media outlets, for example, newspapers and social media. The purpose of the extra-credit assignment is for you to develop the use of your “sociological imagination” and to relate any sociological issue or concept covered in the course to newspaper story that covers or address the sociological issue or concept.

You will find three articles published in major newspapers across the United States (for example, the Houston Chronicle, Galveston Daily News, the New York Times, and the Washington Post). You will write a reflection paper on each article to describe and explain how the article addresses a sociological issue or concept that was covered in class.

I strongly recommend that each news article is not more than three months old.

Each reflection paper will earn you 15 extra-credit points. However, you must turn in all three reflection papers to fulfill the extra-credit grading assignment opportunity, which is 45 points.

Each reflection paper should not be more than one page in length. Your paper should be typed, double-spaced, size font not greater than 12. You must use Times New Roman, one-inch margins top, bottom, and left and right sides. To access the extra-credit reflection paper, you must click on the Assignments link under the Coursework heading. You may also click on the Course Documents and Course Overview learning module in the Learning Modules section to access the extra-credit reflection paper.

Extra-credit alternative assignment opportunity:

This is an extra-credit alternative assignment opportunity with a 45 points value. You will write a paper on your reading experiences to a child or a group of children. The child that you read to may or may not attend school. Feel free to use reading books that you have at home to participate in this reading opportunity.

When young adults or adults read to children in a fun environment, important bonding skills are attained. These skills will help children recognize the importance of reading through the modeling of essential reading behaviors. Conformity-oriented behaviors are also achieved through this type of experience.

Your paper should include the experiences you acquired in reading to young children. In your paper, you should also include the title of the book that you selected; what the book is about; the age or ages of the child or children that you read to; the kinds of questions you utilized to probe their understanding; and, how the child or children reacted to your reading of the story.

Relevant sociological concepts and theoretical perspectives discussed throughout the semester should also be included to sociologically explain your experiences.

Your paper should be at least three pages, typed, double-spaced, and size font not greater than 12. You must use Times New Roman, one-inch margins top, bottom, and left and right sides. To access the extra-credit alternative assignment, you must click on the Assignments link under the Coursework heading.

You may also click on the Course Documents and Course Overview learning module in the Learning Modules section to access the extra-credit alternative paper.

Instructor feedback will be provided individually on the three reflection papers extra-credit assignment or the alternative assignment through My Grades tool or link. The extra-credit assignment will have a rubric with your grade breakdown.

An appeal will not be considered because of general dissatisfaction with a grade, penalty, or outcome of a course. Disagreement with the instructor's professional judgment of the quality of the student's work and performance is also not an admissible basis for a grade appeal.

Benefits of taking this course: This course (a) meets the requirements of a college transfer course for four-year degree programs (b) prepares students for upper-division coursework in sociology (c) prepares students for the academic rigors of upper-division coursework in the social sciences (d) prepares students in developing their critical thinking skills.

Brief Background of Sociology: Sociology was born in the United States because of profound social changes during the decades of the 1920's, 1930's and 1940's. The Chicago School at the University of Chicago was the leading Sociology department in the United States and played an important role in studying the impact of industrialization and urbanization. Sociologists at the Chicago School contributed significantly to the evolution of the Symbolic-Interaction perspective, which was used to understand and explain how social forces were influencing the disorganization of society and the creation of unprecedented social problems.

Sociology has three key areas. These are theory, methodology, and content. Methodology refers to the methods used in collecting data so that we can theorize about some aspect of human behavior within a societal context. Content, on the other hand, refers to the knowledge because of the marriage between theory and methodology.

A theory is a set of propositions that are conceptually joined with the potential of verification and generalization. A theory may also be referred to as a theoretical perspective, which is a viewpoint or a particular way of looking at things relating to human behavior. From this we can, see how both areas complement each other to create content.

The purpose of a theoretical perspective is to describe, explain, and predict social behavior. Most theories or theoretical perspectives appear to be right, and people accept them until they have been tested.

Throughout the delivery of this course, four major theoretical perspectives will be used to analyze human behavior within a social framework. The following sociological perspectives with their corresponding founders will be covered during the semester:

Theoretical Definitions and Founding Contributors

The Structural Functionalist perspective views society as consisting of interrelated parts, each which serves as a function that ideally contributes to the overall stability of society. Contributing Sociologists: Auguste Comte, Herbert Spencer, Emile Durkheim, Talcott Parsons & Robert Merton

The Symbolic-Interaction perspective views social meaning as arising through the process of social interaction and the use of symbols in giving meaning to human communication. Contributing Sociologists: George Mead, Herbert Blumer, Erving Goffman, George Homans, Peter Blau, Alfred Schultz, and Harold Garfinkel.

The Conflict perspective views society as composed of diverse groups with conflicting values and interests. Furthermore, this perspective argues that groups are in conflict with one another due to differential access to scarce resources, which can and do produce varying levels of power, prestige, and wealth. Contributing Sociologists: Karl Marx, George Simmel, Max Weber, C. Wright Mills, Lewis Coser, and Ralf Dahrendorf.

The Feminist perspective analyzes and explains human behavior from a gender focused view. In explaining how gender is rooted into the operation of society, Feminism incorporates the symbolic interaction, conflict, and structural functionalist perspectives into its theoretical propositions.
